Q. In 1976, what did chancellor Denis Healey have to do to help save the British economy?

Like Heath, Callaghan was beset by a trade unionism bo public sector growth to an unprecedented 12 million members.

Q. What were the 1978-9 strikes called?

Frozen rubbish piled up in the streets and there were improbable reports of bodies lying unburied.

On the 10th of January 1979, Callaghan arrived back from a summit in Guadeloupe and was famously quoted as saying by the Sun, 'Crisis? What crisis?'

In March 1979, Callaghan lost his slender majority on a motion of no confidence.
